👁 THINGS TO DO AND SEE

The park and surrounding area offers Wyoming wildlife and recreation at its finest. Camping, boating, swimming, fishing, hiking, and ATV touring are all available within the immediate area. The sights and sounds of wildlife are best in and near Seminoe State Park. Patient visitors can be rewarded with a variety of creatures: big horn sheep, elk, mule deer, antelope, coyote, mountain lion, bobcat, fox, martin, raccoon, skunk, jack rabbit and cottontail rabbit. Bird watchers may glimpse eagles or other birds of prey plus many types of waterfowl and migratory birds. Bring your binoculars, sit back or go for a hike and enjoy!

🐟 FISHING

Seminole Reservoir offers some great fishing for both trout and walleye. Both species inhabit the entire reservoir, though there are areas of greater concentration for each. State record walleye have been pulled from Seminoe in years past. Good river fishing can be found a short drive from the park along the North Platte River from I-80 at Fort Fred Steele State Historic Site all the way to the Gray Reef Area below Alcova Dam. In between lies the famous “Miracle Mile,” well-known for its blue ribbon fly fishing.

📍 LOCATION

Nestled up against the base of the Seminoe Mountains at the North end of Seminoe Reservoir lays one of Wyoming’s true treasures, Seminoe State Park. Located 35 miles north from Sinclair, Wyoming on Carbon County road 351, Seminoe State Park is known for its wide open water, local attractions and friendly atmosphere.

🕒 HISTORY

The Seminoe Mountains surrounding Seminoe State Park were once the site for gold prospecting during the late 1800s. The name “Seminoe” is commonly assumed to come from the Seminole tribe, but is an Americanized spelling of the French name Cimineau. Basil Cimineau Lajeunesse was a French trapper in the area in the 1800s. Seminoe State Park, located on the northwest side of the reservoir, was established in 1965 through an agreement between the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation and the Wyoming Recreation Commission (predecessor to Wyoming State Parks and Historic Sites).
